SUB development

That ancient thing over there

For a campus that's yet to turn one hundred, our SUB building might as well be an antiquity. Built in 1968 for half the student population of today, the SUB building is clearly due for renovations. For AMS executives, this is a big task that certainly requires a lot of forethought and financing before things go through.

The biggest problems are its size. The line-ups and crowds during the noon hour cannot be overlooked. And soon, as campus development continues, AMS businesses will be faced with an increasing amount of competition. Approximately 50% of AMS funds come from SUB businesses and some AMS executives worry that if these business and the SUB don't improve, then student fees will either have to go up, or services will have to go down. And that's a concern. If you don't notice the AMS's presence now, perhaps you'll notice its absence a little more...

So what are the options?

So far there has been discussions of either building another floor or expanding the building to the north.

Until now however, no clear plans seem to be underway, although some candidates seem eager to begin discussing this issue further this upcoming year.

VP Finance

This person has a huge task in front of them: managing the AMS's $9 million in assets and preparing the annual $2 million dollar budget. On top of that, the VP Finance chairs the Finance Commission, the Fundraising and Sponsorship Committee and the Business Operations Committee. That's one big pot of gold. Imagine how many pitchers of beer that could buy us... And, like all AMS executives, the job comes with a tidy annual salary of nearly $21,000.
